About Tylor

Tylor Laney is a litigation and dispute resolution lawyer. He has over 19 years of private practice handling complex commercial disputes. Tylor's practice focuses on disputes involving business transactions, commercial contracts, construction, professional services, insurance coverage, employment, and insurance defense assignments.

Dispute Resolution

Tylor has participated in over 200 mediations in his career, with nearly all involving six-figure and seven-figure damages. Tylor is a skilled and experienced negotiator who enjoys helping his clients solve legal problems upon the most favorable terms possible. In this setting, agreements can sometimes be reached that go beyond the claims at issue and improve other aspects of the client's business or personal life.

Construction

Tylor has represented owners, developers, contractors, and subcontractors in multi-family, single-family and commercial disputes, often involving construction defects, payment, liens, and breach of contract. Tylor employs a strategic approach to these complex cases in order get to the heart of the case, and achieve the most efficient and favorable outcome.

Business and Commercial Disputes

Tylor has represented business owners in a wide variety of matters, including disputes arising from purchase and sale of business, other commercial transactions, breach of contract, vendor agreements, employment agreements, and related matters.

Insurance Coverage

Tylor has substantial experience advising policy holders on commercial and personal insurance coverage issues, including defense obligations, scope of coverage, duty to settle, primary and excess coverage, additional insurance, insurance regulations, bad faith, IFCA, and more.

Insurance Defense

Tylor's insurance defense practice focuses on construction related lawsuits, predominantly involving construction defects, subrogation losses, and construction-related injury claims. Over his career, however, Tylor has handled serious personal injury cases, product liability cases, medical negligence cases, and a wide variety of other general liability cases.

Litigation Approach

Tylor believes successful litigation results from the development and execution of a sound strategy, timely and complete investigation, targeted and tailored discovery, strategic and persuasive motions practice, and diligent trial preparation. At the outset of each case, he works with clients to focus on defining a successful outcome, taking into account that in most cases, clients are concerned with efficiently and favorably resolving litigation matters. Over years of practice, he has a well-established track record of successful results and client satisfaction, having resolved hundreds of cases on behalf of clients.
