About John

John White advises closely held companies and business owners in a variety of matters including partnership agreements, tax issues, succession planning and more. He also advises individuals and businesses on tax and collection issues, estate planning and probate matters. John has extensive experience in campaign finance and election law. This includes advising clients on government regulations relating to political speeches and disclosure obligations.

Tax and Business Law

John White's practice focuses on advising closely-held companies and their owners in business related transactions. This includes partnership matters, contracts, federal and state tax issues, succession planning, and others. He also represents individuals and businesses in audits and administrative actions, relating to state and federal tax matters and collection efforts, and assists individuals with estate planning and probate matters.

Campaign Finance and Election Law

John has advised numerous regional and national clients on campaign finance matters, government regulation of political speeches, and compliance with disclosure obligations. He represents business and political clients before government agencies and the courts.

Appellate Representation

John co-chairs the firm's appellate practice. He has argued before the U.S. and Washington Supreme Courts and intermediate appellate courts, and since 1992 he has served as an Adjunct Professor in Golden Gate University, Braden School of Taxation.

Personal

John and his wife enjoy recreational cycling and weather permitting, John often bikes to work. They are also avid gardeners. When not enjoying the beauty of the northwest by bikes, they can be found reveling in their vegetable and flower gardens.
